Man: And now something for those who want to have fun this weekend. With us today we have Susan Arwood, the organiser of the Annual Atlantic Coast Kite Festival. Susan, tell us something about the event.

Woman: Well, this is the festival's seventh year. As usual, for those participants who are still developing their kite-flying skills and need a helping hand we're going to have kite building and flying workshops. They'll include kite materials and instructions how to build a kite. But the most important event this year is The Best Kite Flying contest.

Man: How can you enter the contest?

Woman: It's very simple. You just have to bring your kite and fly it. It can be a ready-made kite bought in a shop or a kite designed and made by yourself. We'll judge how good you are at flying it.

Man: How long does the kite have to be in the air?

Woman: Participants need to fly their kites at a height of about 30 metres for at least 5 minutes. It's not a very long time but not everybody can do it. It all depends on the wind.

Man: Who can take part in the contest and how much does it cost to enter?

Woman: There are three competitive age groups – Senior for adult participants, Youth for teenagers and Novice for children. The good news is that you don't have to pay to participate in the contest.

Man: Are there any prizes?

Woman: Sure! The winners in each age group will get a medal. In addition, the people present at the festival will be able to vote for their favourite kite. Their votes will then be collected in a special box and counted. If you want, you can see last year's winners on our website at www.kitefestival.com.

Man: Thank you Susan! Let's hope this weekend is really windy!

I once bought flowers online for my aunt's birthday. The bouquet that was delivered didn't look like the one shown on the website at all. Instead of red tulips, they sent yellow roses. The next day, the leaves started falling off. I contacted customer service and they promised to deliver another bouquet. But that never happened, and I didn't get my money back. Well, I guess I've learnt my lesson. I'll never buy flowers online again.

Does your mum love flowers? If you're looking for gift ideas, bring her to our farm on Mother's Day. For just £35 our staff will arrange her selection of plants in a large pot that she can keep on the balcony. Please allow around one hour for the whole process, from looking around our shop and greenhouse to receiving the finished pot. We are open Mondays to Saturdays from 9 am to 6 pm. No booking is needed. We are looking forward to seeing you!

One of our listeners has asked whether you can turn a bouquet of flowers that somebody's given you into a plant that grows. Well, I've seen videos on YouTube about doing that with roses. You can put them into a bucket of soil instead of water or even…stick them into a potato. I was interested in the second method and decided to test it. I kept the roses out of the sun and added a special hormone to the potatoes. I had to wait eight weeks to find out if it was successful. The result was great, the roses started growing.

There are thousands of wildflowers in the UK. But some of them are gradually disappearing from our forests, woods and countryside. That is why I decided to join an organisation called "The Forgotten Beauty", which takes care of the flowers in national parks. At first I was a volunteer, but a year ago when I graduated, I started working full time for the organisation.

Woman: George, why are you wearing a T-shirt with the slogan 'Save the Tuna Fish'?
Man: Because I believe people need to realise that it's a bad idea to eat tuna.
Woman: I agree, and I've read that tuna is less available now because tuna fishing is forbidden in some places.
Man: Whatever the law is, when I go to restaurants, I often see tuna on the menu. It's one of the most popular fish in the world.
Woman: You are right George. Is there anything that can be done?
Man: Everyone can make a difference just by deciding not to eat tuna. I used to love tuna sandwiches, but I don't eat them anymore. I think that fish are much more valuable as part of the natural world than as food for humans.

Jack Jones, a fifteen-year-old student, has won an important international science contest. He got the prize for creating a medical diagnostic blood test that is much faster and cheaper than those used at present. He says the idea of taking part in the contest came from his biology teacher. But it was Jack's fascination with studying via the Internet that led to his success. He managed to create his new test after reading hundreds of papers on science websites.

Woman: Any ideas what to do in Southampton?
Man: We could visit The Titanic Exhibition.
Woman: Is there anything interesting there?
Man: Hundreds of things, including letters written by passengers or the crew, and a watch which stopped as the ship sank in the Atlantic. And there are the costumes worn by the actors in the Titanic movie.
Woman: I would rather find out more about people's reactions to the tragedy. Look, it says here that in the library next to the exhibition there are newspapers from the time when the ship sank. I think I'll go to there.
Man: Then, you can spend time in the library, and I'll look around the exhibition.

Woman: Chris, how did you learn Polish?
Man: I wanted to study in Poland, so first I attended a beginner's Polish course here, in Britain. Unfortunately, I found the language very hard and at the end of the course I couldn't even say one sentence. So, I decided to go to Cracow to teach English and just practise my Polish as much as I could by talking to my new friends in my spare time. After three months of trying to communicate in Polish, I actually began to understand what people were saying and I started speaking. That is when I realized that the course back home had been a good decision after all. It had taught me skills which I was able to develop easily when I was in Poland.

Ladies and gentlemen, we hope you have enjoyed our 10-hour flight from Singapore. In a few minutes we will be landing at Tokyo-Haneda airport. Please make sure your seat backs and tables are in their full upright position. Check that your seat belt is fastened, and all hand luggage is placed under the seat or in the overhead lockers. And remember to turn off all your electronic devices. You can turn them back on after we have landed, and the aircraft has come to a complete stop. Now you can enjoy the beautiful views of Tokyo as we come down out of the clouds.
