Man: Lexie, you're the youngest person to visit every country on Earth. How was it possible?

Woman: I grew up in a family that owns a travel agency, so travelling has always been a part of my life. Originally, I wasn't trying to break the record, but when I was 18, I realized that I had already been to 72 countries and that I was inspiring other people to follow my example, especially young women.

Man: Where do you get your money for travelling?

Woman: I always knew I wanted to travel, so I've been doing any job I can find, trying to save as much as I can. I don't get any sponsorship for my trips. I'm 21 and I still live with my parents, I don't have a car and I'm careful about what I buy. I also do a lot of research before going on a trip. I look for the best offers, book flights early and choose cheap hotels.

Man: What has been the highlight of your trips?

Woman: Going to countries which people don't usually visit because they are afraid, but I have met more friendly and helpful people in such places than in typical tourist destinations.

Man: Is there anywhere where you think there are real difficulties for travellers?

Woman: West Africa is difficult because of language problems and the high cost of travelling. There aren't many hotels there and the prices are really high.

Man: Please tell us, what are your plans for the future?

Woman: Well, I'm planning to write a book about my experiences, but I haven't started yet. I'm also going to try public speaking – my first TED talk is next week.

I've always wondered how toy producers know which new toys will be a hit among children. Well, I've just found out how one company does it. It holds toy-testing sessions every three months. Groups of children, together with their parents, are invited to a place called the Play Lab. This is a huge playroom full of toys which have been recently designed. Experts watch the children play to see which toys they prefer. The Play Lab tests over 450 new toys every year and it's completely free!

Guess what! I found some old toy cars and action figures while I was cleaning the attic. They were my favourite toys when I was a child! I wonder how much I could get for them? They may be worth a fortune. Who knows? Do you know how I can find out? If you have any ideas, let me know. Maybe a collector would be interested in buying them, and I could put the cash towards my summer holiday this year. Please call me back whenever you can.

I've just found out about this amazing place where you can build your own toy car or lorry. Each part, from the wheels to the roof, has hundreds of options to choose from, so you can make something totally unique. When I heard about it, I immediately thought of your brother. He is a real car fan, and he also collects toys, doesn't he? Plus, he's turning 12 next month, so I thought going there would be the perfect present for him. The entrance tickets aren't cheap, but I'm sure he'll love it. What do you think?

The recent grand opening of a toy shop in our town last Saturday caused a lot of excitement. Hundreds of children and their parents lined up early, waiting impatiently for the doors to open. But before anyone could start shopping, a group of children got a special treat. They were allowed to run around the shop for three minutes, and pick out all the toys they wanted, even the most expensive ones, and they didn't have to pay for any of them. The reason was that they'd won a competition organized by the shop.

Can you imagine making a home out of an airplane? Recently, I read about Jo Ann Ussery, who bought an old Boeing 727 in 1994 and renovated it to make it a fully functional home. It had a large living room, three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a kitchen. Jo Ann lived on the airplane from 1995 to 1999. But Jo Ann is not the only person to have done something like this. When Bruce Campbell heard about Jo Ann's project, he was so excited that he decided to do the same thing. He has been living on another Boeing 727 in the woods of Hillsboro, Oregon, for more than 20 years.

Have you ever played Scrabble, the game where you place letters on a special board to make words? If so, there's another game you might like. It's called Quiddler and it's a game where you make words from cards in your hand. There's no board, so you can play it anywhere. The game takes about 20 minutes to play, so it's much shorter than Scrabble. And Quiddler is better if a lot of people want to play. Up to four people can play Scrabble at the same time, but twice as many can play Quiddler.

Hi everyone, just a quick reminder that from next week we are going to have a month of free weekly exercise sessions. An experienced trainer from a local gym is going to visit us to show us how to practise movements that will reduce the pain that comes with sitting at a desk for long hours. These sessions will also be a great way to socialize with your colleagues! So, we're inviting you to join us every Tuesday at 8 a.m. in the conference room. If you can't attend, the trainer has prepared a special booklet with basic tips for everybody. You can pick it up from the office.

And now, some local news. Avoid Riverside Avenue if you're driving through the city. It's the middle of the summer, but the road looks like a winter scene. That's because of a van which was transporting powdered milk. It had a broken back door which opened while the van was on its way to a delivery. As a result, the whole road is now covered with white powder. Special crews are doing all they can to clean up the road as quickly as possible.

One day, during my last summer holidays, I was kayaking down the Colorado River with my friend. As we were fascinated by some very tall grass growing on the river banks, I decided to get closer so that we could see the grass better. Unfortunately, I was so focused on the grass that I didn't see a huge rock in the river. We hit it, and the kayak began to sink. Luckily, we can both swim, and the day was very warm, so the cold water actually felt really nice. And that's how we spent the rest of the day – swimming in the river instead of kayaking.
