A SECOND-HAND PRESENT

My name's Mark and I love getting presents. Last Christmas my mum gave me a smart blue sweater. I also got a beautiful ski jacket from my older brother. He is a skier like me so he knew what I wanted. But when I opened the present from my grandma, I saw a scarf. An orange scarf! I hate orange. I didn't even take the scarf out of the box or show it to anyone. Of course, I said "Thank you" to my grandmother but I didn't like her present.

Two weeks later my friend Sarah called and invited me to her birthday party. There was one problem – I didn't have a present for Sarah. I had no time to go shopping because I was packing my things for the winter holiday in the mountains. Then I remembered the orange scarf. I thought: "Sarah likes orange, maybe she'd look good in it."

When Sarah unpacked the present from me, she put the scarf around her neck. Suddenly she saw something. There was my name, MARK, at the end of the scarf. How stupid of me! I felt awful and Sarah was angry with me. I explained that it was a mistake. She didn't believe me. The next day I bought her a pair of earrings. Sarah was really happy.

I will never again give anyone a present I got from someone else!
